

Forensic Nurse Advisor for Sexual Assault

Supporting the military community

Emma Hatfield
FORENSIC NURSE ADVISOR

As a Forensic Nurse Advisor (Military), I am commissioned to be the Single Point of Contact for Armed Forces Personnel for Sexual Assault Referral Centre (SARC) cases in the North Yorkshire and Humber region, ensuring the highest standard of care and support.

My responsibilities extend beyond clinical examinations; I am a mentor, guiding armed forces personnel and associated agencies in the delicate process of caring for survivors of rape and sexual assault. Through continuous education and awareness initiatives, I champion a positive culture within the military community.

I am deeply committed to upholding the highest standards of clinical competence. Proficient in a range of clinical skills, from forensic examinations to sexual health risk assessments.

I will ensure that every survivor receives the utmost care and attention. Moreover, I am a staunch advocate for ongoing research and quality improvement, striving to enhance the services available to survivors continually. In this role, I am not only a healthcare provider but also a communicator, responsible for conveying new initiatives and messages on behalf of organisations such as the MOD and NHS.

With a compassionate heart and unwavering dedication, I stand at the forefront of supporting survivors, ensuring that they receive not only medical care but also the empathy and understanding necessary for their healing journey.
